

FAQ's

Do I have to wait until I have registered the death before arranging the funeral?

No. Arranging the funeral services involves your Funeral Director discussing with you the type of funeral required, and offering you advice and information as appropriate. This can be done as soon as you have made certain decisions about the funeral— e.g. whether it is to be a burial or cremation. Once the doctor has certified the death we can undertake the funeral.

Death Certificates— where to get one?

When a death occurs a copy of the Certificate may be obtained from the Office of Registration of Deaths & Births, Adelaide Street, Cork, or the local Registration Office. If death occurs at home or hospital the next of kin obtains a Certificate as to the cause of death from the doctor attending the deceased and takes the Certificate to his/her local Health Centre. Where a Post Mortem takes place it is the Coroner who registers the death and a copy of the Certificate again may be obtained at the Office of Registration of Deaths & Births, Adelaide Street, Cork. 021-4275126

Credit Unions

The Irish league of Credit unions has introduced a new benefit for members, paid towards funeral expenses, at participating branches.

Bank Accounts & Probate

For accounts in a sole name with a sufficient credit balance. Reasonable funeral expenses may be paid without a Grant of Probate (or Letters of Administration), upon production of an invoice from the Funeral Director. This does not extend to payment for associated hospitality or other significant discretionary expenditures.

We have never been a religious family.

Do Fitz-Gerald's have a priest to take the service? No-there is no requirement to hold a religious funeral service, and there are a number of alternatives. Perhaps a relative or friend could take the service if they feel able to do so. Other members of the congregation could speak or read verses of poems. Ask Fitz-Gerald's for more information or to organise a Humanist Ceremony.

Information & Frequently Asked Questions

Remember—You have a definite say in all arrangements. Do not be afraid to assert your views, wishes & ask questions. All wishes should be honoured unless what you are asking for is against the law or physically impossible.

Arranging a Funeral

Even though none of us wants to arrange a funeral many of us may be unsure as to how to proceed. Arranging the funeral of a loved one is an extremely traumatic time. There are many choices to be made and often it is easier to make them at your own convenience. It is the purpose of this booklet to provide the options available to the bereaved.

Fitz-Gerald's will consult with the family of the deceased at the Hospital, Nursing Home, Family Residence or Funeral Home, and take the time to understand their requests and how best to carry out their wishes, e.g. If a coffin is to remain open or closed in the funeral home & or family home.

Fitz-Gerald's make all the appropriate arrangements once you have decided whether you would like the deceased to rest at home, at a church, or at our funeral home. Funeral Directors must follow certain legal criteria.

It is possible to have a combination of a private family wake at home followed by a public viewing at the Funeral Home. This combines tradition while also removing the stress of opening your house up to potentially large numbers of visitors.

THE JOB OF FUNERAL DIRECTORS

Funeral Directors have a very specific role in assuming overall responsibility for arranging and supervising a funeral. The Funeral Director's responsibilities involve.....

Caring for the Bereaved

- We treat the deceased with dignity and we care for the living
- Families are encouraged to bring personal items which reflect your loved one's hobbies & interests
- Assuming responsibility for ensuring that every aspect of the funeral is organised and carried out in keeping with religious and personal preferences and within the agreed budget
- Providing help, support and guidance when and as required
- Providing relevant information and assistance before, during and after the funeral
- Fitz-Gerald's can put a member of the bereaved family in touch with a Bereavement Councillor if they request

Assistance with Arranging a Funeral
